Team Work:

Contributes to Team Meetings: The team held meeting frequently every 2 days a week to assign tasks but most importantly to discuss the issues that occured in the project and the solution for it.

Facilitates the Contributions of Team Members: Using Github the team could look at the contribution being done in the project by each member. As well as using the trello where the tasks are assigned to see whether each team member was given equal amount of tasks.

Individual Contributions Outside of Team Meetings: After the meetings the team would complete their given tasks in their own time and then in the next meeting the member will show that the work was completed. The team did complete most of tasks by the given deadline. If the team member had some issue when doing the task other team member would try their best to help in the next meeting.

Fosters Constructive Team Climate: When in team meeting, the team was very respectful and helpful to each other. No one would disrespect the capabilities of the team member. Everyone would be assigned to tasks equally and contribute equally.

Responds to Conflict: Some conflict does arise when in the meeting but the team would calmly try to come up with a solution in the meeting. The team talk to each other and think what can be done to solve that possible issue/ conflict that arises.
